Dementia Awareness in schools

Dementia can have a significant impact upon a family and community, as well as the person who is living with dementia. By teaching young people about the condition, we can help them to understand dementia and empower them to make a positive difference, helping to improve lives for those affected by dementia.

BDAA is working in collaboration with Sally Townsend, Alzheimer's Society, with the joint aim of raising dementia awareness with young people in Bristol and creating positive social change, so that we can become more dementia friendly as a city. Sally offers a range of free opportunities to raise dementia awareness in Bristol schools and is currently working successfully with more than 30 schools. If you would like further information please contact sally.townsend@alzheimers.org.uk.
